Faculty Professional Development Honorarium

The focus of the Faculty Professional Development Honorarium is to help faculty receive the training or resources needed to be more effective teachers. All faculty members (including part-time and adjuncts) are welcome to apply for an honorarium not to exceed $1000 to attend workshops or conferences where the emphasis is on methods of teaching and learning rather than on specific fields of expertise.

This honorarium is either for individual faculty development or a group approach with a common goal. For example, research into new or innovative instructional strategies, the development of new teaching materials, or utilizing resource personnel to bring state of the art methods to courses.

Application DEADLINE: December 3, 2007

Application available at www.ndccc.org

North Dakota Great Teacher Seminar

May 13-16, 2008

Medora

This small retreat (limited to 35 people) brings college teachers together to learn from each other and exchange teaching ideas and solutions. In spite of what the name might suggest, the seminar is not so much an assembly of 'great teachers' as it is a group of dedicated educators in search of the 'great teacher' within themselves. With no experts or keynote speakers, the seminar is based on the principle that teachers are the experts in teaching and learn best from one another. If you are interested in attending, please contact your NDCCC representative for more information.
